NON-INTEREST BEARING CERTIFICATE SALES SOARING

Sales of Dominion of Canada non-interest bearing certificates during September totalled $57,660 from 244 subscriptions, the Bank of Canada announces on behalf of the minister of finance. Aggregate sales to date amount to $721,023.

Banks, post offices and agencies of the Bank of Canada handle applications for subscriptions to these certificates, and no commissions are paid for sales, the entire proceeds being devoted to the purpose for which they are sold. Series "A" issue is earmarked for prosecution of the war, while Series "B" proceeds are for relief of suffering caused by war.

For the September sales of Series "A" issue, which totalled $56,576, there were 95 subscribers, and of these 84 were previous purchasers of the non-interest bearing certificates. There were 149 applications for the Series "B" issue in September, for a total of $1,083.

CZECHOSLOVAKIAN MISSION REPRESENTATIVES HEARD

The Columbus hall was packed by a capacity audience on Sunday afternoon to hear the visiting members of the Czechoslovakian Mission, which included Senator Vojta Benes, Lieut. Rudolf Nekola, of the army corps; Colonel Jan Ambrus, of the air force; and Karl Buzek, of the Czechoslovakian National Alliance of Toronto.

On behalf of the Czechoslovakia of Frank, Mr. Frank Wejn read an address of welcome. John Danco, president of the Crow's Nest branch of the Alliance, acted as chairman, while the address of welcome was delivered by Mayor E. Williams. The hall was very fittingly decorated, with the British and Czechoslovak flags well featured. There were also numerous Victory "V's," the three dots and dash, etc.

The meeting was opened with the singing of "O Canada" and "Where is My Home?"

The main address was delivered by Senator Benes, who is a brother of the former president, who spoke highly of the spirit, morale and fighting qualities of the Russians. He stated that after the October revolution in 1917, the country was industrialized to an extent, and people taught to use more machines. They built big factories and other industries. But as good as was the progress made, it was impossible to change a country overnight, so that although they knew sooner or later they would have to fight Germany, they kept stalling Hitler with trade pacts. But when Hitler struck, Russia was still unprepared, and was forced to retreat, but the senator stated emphatically that Russia would never lose the war, no matter how far they had to retreat, and especially now that help was being given her by her allies. He appealed to youths of Czechoslovakia to take up arms in the fight for freedom.

The purpose of the meeting was to stress upon Czechoslovakians residing in the district the great necessity of lining up to help fight the world's greatest crisis of all time, Hitler. The senator's appeal met with liberal cheering response and an apparent willingness to support him in his mission wholeheartedly.

At the close of the meeting little Miss Rose Rozicka, of Bellevue, presented a lovely bouquet of flowers to the mission, and the six little girls accompanying her, in native costume, recited verses of welcome, which each member of the mission kindly acknowledged.

During their short stay here, members of the mission were entertained at various homes before proceeding to Michel-Natal, where they were to speak at night. Their itinerary will require them to visit most communities from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

To encourage marriages, certain down-east preachers offer to tie the knot free of charge. Anyway, there should be no down payments or installments in such cases.

"V" FOR VICTORY

Victory is written on the wall! Its note is sounded, and the sign Conveys new hope with each chalked "V" line.

"BASIC DIVIDENDS" DEFERRED

According to figures given out by Alberta's provincial treasurer, the Alberta government had an over-all surplus as of last March amounting to two and a quarter million dollars.

Some of our Social Credit friends do not doubt was eloquent about this rosy financial picture as painted by the Hon. Solon Low. But the other side of the picture, not shown to the public, is the twenty millions of defaulted bonds during the past six years and the twenty-six millions which the province of Alberta has borrowed from the Federal Government and given its I.O.U. as security, all of which some day will have to be paid—not to mention a few other millions due to bondholders on interest account.

Juggling figures, even in a provincial treasurer's ledger, does not settle any debts owed by a province any more than similar juggling of figures does in the ledger of an individual or company, and while no one can blame the Hon. Solon for exhibiting the best side of his financial picture to public view, we would not advise Albertans to become over excited about early payment of their "basic dividend," but to visualize spending them along about 5000 A.D.—Torchii Tribune.

Mrs. Griffiths, wife of Mr. Jack Griffiths, passed away at Coleman last week end, following a long illness. The remains were laid to rest on Monday.

FOR OR AGAINST

Citizens of Canada are now lined up for or against the country's war effort. None has shouted an imperative order to us to fall in in one line or the other. Circumstances alone have dictated that all shall be in one line or the other.

The average intelligence of Canadians is reputed to be high. There should be few within the Dominion who have yet to fully understand that every man and woman is in the fight to keep Hitler out of Canada. With that understanding, those who continue to say "Let George do it," and who put selfish interests first, refusing to give or lend as much of their worldly possessions as possible for the fight, are definitely lined up against the war effort.

The man or woman who slows up or stops the flow of war material across the Atlantic by participating in a strike is also lined up against the war effort—in spite of the fact that this war is being fought to preserve the right of a man or woman to strike if they believe they are not getting a square deal from the employer.

The young man who fights voluntary enlistment because he would rather have the comfort of home life and the higher wages in the war-time economy is against the war effort. The girl or the mother who schemes and plots to thwart the desires of a young man to enlist is against the war effort.

The quilt drawn for by the ladies of the Lundbreck Women's Institute on Saturday was won by Miss J. Dock, Shanghai Hay Ping, Canton, China, daughter of the cook at the Windsor hotel, Lundbreck, on ticket No. 10, drawn by Mrs. A. M. Densmore.

Navy week will be observed throughout Canada from October 19 to October 25 inclusive, under the Navy League of Canada. Special tribute to the men in the allied navy and merchant services has been endorsed by governmental authorities, ministers of education in all the provinces of Canada, heads of churches of all denominations, the press and the radio stations.

LOCAL AND GENERAL ITEMS

By March 31st next, Alberta's tax bank experiment will have cost the people of the province in the neighborhood of one million dollars—lost.

Robert Hubbertsey, of Elko, passed away in the Ferns hospital Thursday of last week. He had been a resident of the district for upwards of thirty-five years.

All business people in The Pass, including the hotels, are ably helping our war effort. We overheard the question asked on Sunday: "What is McCloy doing along that line?"

Mrs. A. Z. Hicks passed away suddenly at her home in Okotoks on Sunday, October 13th, aged 60. She had been a resident there for 37 years, and is survived by her husband, two daughters and two sons.

M. Harding, of the Calgary air-training school, was a visitor to Blairmore on Sunday, and incidentally called on eye editor. Their home towns in Newfoundland are but fifty miles apart, Norris' Point and Curling.

Parking space set aside by the government for the benefit of tourists desirous of viewing or picturing Turtle Mountain and the Frank Slide, was occupied occasionally over the week end by the police highway patrol car.

In western Georgia a jury convened to inquire into a case of suicide. After sitting through the evidence, the twelve men retired, and after deliberating returned with the following verdict: "The jury are of one mind—temporarily insane."

Alberta Treasury branches have paid out about $6,000 in bonuses during the year to purchasers of Alberta-made goods. That was the purpose for which they were created. The sum of $10,000 for postage, telegrams and telephones was expended in producing this achievement. That's business for you!—The Spotlight.

Howard Anderson, famous hockey star of the Trail Smoke Eaters, and formerly with the Bellevue Bulldogs, was killed in a plane crash at Sylvan Lake on Sunday. Anderson was piloting a Consolidated Mining Co's plane from Goldfields, Sask., to Trail, when the crash occurred. A few years ago Howard married Miss Jordan, of Bellevue.

Little Mike this year raised four hundred pounds of potatoes from two hundred hills. He is now harvesting them, and wonders what it will cost to send them to Lethbridge, the nearest grading station. He could sell fourteen pounds to a next door neighbor if they were graded. Probably he could arrange with Mr. Aberhart to send an expert or specialist, here from Edmonton or Lethbridge at a cost of $50 or less.

How long will the Aberhart administration keep up this pretence of benefiting the people of Alberta at their own cost to the amount of a few paltry hundreds of dollars? The cost is nearly a million dollars. It isn't a million yet, but the deficit for 1940-41 to last March, was $344,522. It only needs another such deficit added to the $720,936 to make the total $1,065,458, to be added to the province's losses.—The Spotlight.

British art dealers did not take their annual holiday this year, because they were too busy. Their export business has gone up 100 per cent since last year. Eighty per cent of precious books, rare bindings and old silver sold at London auctions is now bought by America. At the June sale of the library of the great surgeon, Sir D'Arcy Power, which fetched $2,414, no less than $1,388 was spent by a single American buyer. In silver, Americans are out for large Georgian sets of soup and meat plates. The main reason for the present migration of old English silver to the States is the high income tax and death duties.

Canada At War

It is hardly necessary to discuss Canada's war effort for our Canadian audience, says the monthly letter of the Royal Canadian Air Force, October, and continues: "The information in this article is intended mainly for our readers in the United States, where many features of our war effort have, through ignorance or mendacity, been misrepresented. Since most of these views have originated with people who could have not the slightest difficulty in obtaining correct and reliable information, and who, in the main, are prominent in isolationist or pro-German activities, it seems advisable that even at the risk of being accused of violating our rule not to discuss matters with a controversial political tinge, the prevalent misrepresentation should be answered."

Official statements, and all figures quoted in this article have been drawn from official sources, show that more than 400,000 Canadian sailors, soldiers and airmen are now enrolled; of this total 100,000 soldiers and airmen are overseas. On the basis of comparative population, this is the equivalent of the enlistment of 5,500,000 men by the United States and the despatch of 1,100,000 for service abroad.

Canada's Navy two years ago comprised 1,700 of all ranks and, fifteen vessels of all descriptions. Today it includes more than 25,000 men and 250 vessels—destroyers, armed merchant cruisers, corvettes, minesweepers, patrol and anti-submarine craft. It went into action the moment war was declared and has performed valiant service.

Since September, 1939, the Canadian Army of 4,500 men has become one of 280,000 volunteers enlisted for service anywhere; scores of thousands of these men are on duty in England, in Newfoundland, in the West Indies and Gibraltar. In addition the non-permanent active militia, corresponding to the National Guard of the United States, has grown from 45,000 men to a Reserve Army of 170,000 on call for duty in Canada as needed.

The Royal Canadian Air Force began with 4,000 men. Now it has 80,000 (the equivalent of an air personnel of 900,000 in the United States) with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan operating 120 separate establishments in Canada. Already thousands of Canadians and others trained in these schools have done heroic work, many at the sacrifice of their lives. Men are now being graduated at twice the rate originally planned for this time as pilots, observers, gunners or radio-operators for duty in fighters and bombers over embattled Britain or Hitler-controlled Europe. Canada provides 80 per cent. of the students at these schools, with others from Australia, New Zealand, Great Britain and other parts of the Empire. Canada has welcomed many from the United States who came to enlist for training or to serve as instructors. The total cost is placed at $824 million for the first three years; of this Canada will contribute $534 million.

Financial Aid To Britain

"But," says our critics, "Canada's aid to Britain is paid for on the 'barrelhead'." In reality, Canadians have provided Britain with about three-quarters of the Canadian dollars she has so far needed to purchase war supplies in Canada and they will finance the bulk of Britain's expenditures in Canada in the coming months. In addition to the value of British goods sent to Canada, Great Britain has already received a billion Canadian dollars to cover her purchases in this country. About a quarter of this sum Great Britain paid Canada in gold. But Canada has shipped not only all of this gold but much more to the United States in order to fill these British orders; and there have been no gold shipments from Great Britain to Canada since December, 1940. The remaining $750 million Canada has supplied. Canada provides Great Britain with some of the Canadian money she needs by repatriating Canadian securities held in Great Britain. . . . All this credit, like the money raised to be spent on Canada's own war effort, must be provided by the Canadian people. During the present fiscal year, (April 1, 1941 to March 31, 1942) the total required for such financial aid to Great Britain is estimated at an additional $900 million.

No Apologies Needed

On September 15th it was officially announced that actual deliveries by the United States up to August 31st, under the "Lend-Lease" Act had a value of $325 million; expenditures for articles or services not yet completed had an additional value of $162 million, making $487 million in all. It is perfectly clear from official statements that Canadian sales to Great Britain on open account, without we believe, any more definite understanding regarding repayment than under "Lend-Lease" operations, have certainly greatly exceeded total deliveries to date from the United States. When it is considered that Canada's industrialization was at the beginning of the war much lower in relation to population than that of the United States, this is hardly a record to require apologies on our part.

In Canada's case, "Aid to Britain" as the centre of our war effort is a misnomer. Canada is in the war to aid Great Britain certainly but primarily as an active belligerent in her own security, and, to loans by Canada to Great Britain must be added the tremendous expense of maintaining air and military forces overseas as well as naval services.

It is undoubtedly true that in our war effort we have left undone many things that we ought to have done. It is true that the average effort could be more intense than it is. To a limited degree Canada has been suffering the disgraceful spectacle of strikes in war industries. But when the worst has been said, any suggestion that Canada as a whole has not thrown herself heart and soul into the existing struggle, without consideration of cost or sacrifice, is something short of the truth.

We have yet to hear of anyone in authority in Canada making any suggestion that the United States has not a perfect right to determine her course of action in relation to the war. We do, however, resent any attempt by citizens of the United States to justify their position by misrepresenting the Canadian war effort.

Needed It All

Farm Woman Had Good Reason For Not Sparring Bread

A Toronto man and his family making an automobile tour of the north shore of Lake St. Lawrence found that the bread supply for a wayside meal was short. A call was made at a French-Canadian farm kitchen to secure a loaf. But the woman who responded to the knock at the door could not oblige. She was so sorry, but her own family would be short of bread too, at the next meal—there were only five loaves left in the box.

Life Saving Feat

Daring Aviator Lands Plane In Heavy Sea To Rescue Survivors

To save seamen from a torpedoed British merchantman, Lieut. W. R. G. Chessman of the fleet air arm landed a plane on a heavy sea, towed a lifeboat around to pick up the survivors and then accepted a tow back to port himself from a trawler. The story of his life-saving feat was told by the admiralty.

Piloting a Walrus plane, Chessman sighted survivors of the Burmese, clinging to wreckage or in lifeboats. The ship had been torpedoed after a gun-duel with a submarine. Two miles away he saw two lifeboats, one with two men in it, the other empty. He had insufficient gasoline to fly back to base to summon help. So he alighted near the lifeboat with the two men.

They swam to the plane and were hauled aboard, exhausted. Chessman then taxied his plane to the other lifeboat.

"I stopped my engine and swam to the boat with a line which I attached to it," Chessman said, describing the rescue. "I swam back to the aircraft, started the engine and towed the boat back to the survivors."

The boat was then manned and picked up many other seamen from the wreckage.

After five hours two trawlers were sighted. In response to signals from the plane they came to the scene. They picked up the survivors and took the plane in tow.

In spite of the stormy conditions 20 hours after taking off the Walrus was safely brought into port.

MARRIED

A courtship in English, Norwegian and French has ended in the engagement of a daughter of one of Canada's oldest French-Canadian families to a lieutenant of the Royal Norwegian Air Force. The bride is Louise Chevrier, daughter of Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier of the Supreme court of Ontario, and Mrs. Chevrier, and her husband is Lieutenant Per Thorsdahl, a flying instructor at Medicine Hat, Alta., where Norwegian and Canadian airmen are training. The marriage took place in the chapel of the air school at Medicine Hat.

Saying It Again

Soldiers Everywhere Have Good Word For Salvation Army Work

Overseas soldiers during the Great War always had a good word to say for the Salvation Army, and, both overseas and at home, they are saying it again in this war. In Canada alone the Salvation Army, in addition to many other services, has already entertained 572,083 service men at concerts, another 1,950,622 at motion picture shows and 1,455,145 at various forms of indoor recreation. It has served more than 10,000,000 in its canteens and distributed more than 12,000,000 sheets of writing paper. It has mended 41,110 articles of clothing for the men, given away 295,000 articles of clothing and served without cost more than 400,000 meals. No wonder the soldiers and sailors and the airmen like the Salvation Army.

Building Up Reserve

Every male between the ages of 16 and 60 in Russia will have to take military training in spare time and it is calculated the greatest reserve army in the world will be created. Already 9,000,000 Russians are in the field, with another 4,000,000 equipped and ready.

Jack Miner in Movies

Gabriel Pascal Will Produce Life Of Jack Miner For World Showing

Kingville citizens are excited over the prospect of rubbing elbows for a while with movie stars and producers. Gabriel Pascal, the dark-haired Hungarian producer of "Pygmalion," will soon visit Kingville with his staff to start producing the life story of Jack Miner. Children are already getting their autograph books and pencils ready, awaiting the arrival of several famous movie artists who are expected to take part in the production. The whole setting of the picture is to be around Jack Miner's home and his sanctuary. Plans are that it will take nearly two years to produce the picture. Many of Jack Miner's famous addresses will be put into the sound track, so that they may be heard by the picture. The picture will include selections from his world-wide radio broadcast, his Rotary Club addresses, and his famous bird lectures.

The picture will be the first complete Canadian movie ever produced in its entirety in Canada, it is stated. Not only will it be released in the United States and Canada, but it will be shown all over the world, which takes from 10 to 12 years, according to moving picture authorities. In the United States and Canada it will be released by one of the largest distributing companies.

The picture will bring additional fame to Jack Miner and to his famous bird sanctuary in Essex County. Mr. Miner has already been rated the best-known Canadian citizen and he ranks fifth in the United States, according to recent survey. The picture will take in the old life, according to the Miner home, but it will also feature Mr. Miner's home life, his love for flowers, children, birds, animals, fishing, baseball, blue rock shooting, and chiefly, his love for his fellowmen.

APPLES AND BRIAN MAKE GOOD PAIR FOR FALL DISHES

Apples, red and glowing from the autumn sun, sweet and juicy inside—this is the season when they hang ripe in the orchards and the trees are filled with baskets of this kind of fruits. It's the season, too, when the fragrant smell of apples fills the kitchen, when apples are tucked into school lunches and apple pie, apple fritters, and apple dumplings grace the table. Stick to these good old fashioned apple dishes—there's nothing better. But if experimenting a bit, try apples with bran. It's amazing how the pungent taste of apple combines with the nut-like delicacy of this popular breakfast cereal. Together they make a fine team—and a tasty one. Recommended are Applescotch Pie, a dessert for the angels. It is made as follows:

Applescotch Pie

Combine 3/4 cup sugar, water, vinegar, bring to a boil. Add apples and simmer until tender. Remove apples and cool. Combine with remaining sugar, flour and salt and add to syrup. Mix well, cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add butter and flavoring. Cool. Place apples in pie pan lined with All-Bran pastry. Pour syrup over top. Form a lattice with pastry strips over surface of pie. Bake in moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) about 35 minutes.
Yield: One 9-inch pie.

(*) All-Bran Pastry
1/4 cup All-Bran
1/4 cups flour

Inspiration For Poet

Writer in Victorian Age Had Liking For One Letter

Apart from being what Sam Weller "spelt it with" on those rare occasions when he had to write his name, the letter "V" has other literary associations, says a writer in the "Manchester Guardian Weekly." Ernest Dowson, the Victorian poet, once told Arthur Symonds that his ideal for a line of verse was Poe's "The violet, the violet, and the vine," and he explained his preference by saying that "the letter 'V' was the most beautiful of the letters, and could never be brought into verse too often." This theory no doubt inspired Dowson to write "Violets and leaves of vine, For love that lives a day."

Portraits Of Flyers

Shown At The Exhibition Of The National Gallery At Ottawa

Portraits of Canadian flyers and scenes of Canadian soldiers in Britain are among pictures in the "Britain At War" exhibition at the national gallery at Ottawa. The pictures, never shown before, are by well-known British portrait painters and artists.

A young artist, Cuthbert Orde, sent portraits of: Sqdn.-Ldr. D. R. S. Bader, D.S.O., D.F.C., the legless leader of the first Canadian fighter squadron who now is a prisoner in Germany; and Pte-Lt. R. M. Tamblin, D.F.C., Watrous, Sask.

CANADA PLANS TO INCREASE OUTPUT OF CARGO VESSELS

Montreal. — Canada expects to duplicate Britain's 1942 output of cargo ships, Montreal Minister C. D. Howe said here at the launching of the Fort Ville-Marie, first of 150 freighters ordered to be built in Dominion shipyards for the British government.

Designed to supplement the empire's war-ravaged merchant fleet, the Fort Ville-Marie, 9,300 tons, is the largest ship ever built in Canada. One hundred and fifty steel vessels will follow her and already keels have been laid for 24 vessels of the Fort Ville-Marie design.

With a blessing in French, Mrs. Howe, wife of the minister, launched the first of the line of ships that will commemorate forts famous in Canadian history. The site of Fort Ville-Marie is now covered by the city of Montreal.

"I fear that few of our citizens have any conception of the size of the program we have undertaken," the minister said just before the launching in the Canadian Vickers yards where the Fort Ville-Marie was built in six months.

"If our objective for 1942 is reached, we expect in that year that Canada's program will equal to British annual output of cargo ships."

Canada can take place in the front rank of the shipbuilding nations of the world, Mr. Howe said, with the continued co-operation between management and labor. "It seems probable that the impetus that will be given to the shipbuilding industry by this program will carry on long after the war is won."

"Within one week, a sister ship will be launched at Vancouver to be followed by a steady procession of cargo ships from 42 construction berths in 14 individual shipyards located at Pictou, N.S., Saint John, N.B., Quebec City, LaSalle, Que., Sorel, Que., Montreal, Victoria and Prince Rupert, B.C."

Because of expansion of Canadian shipbuilding plants material imported into the Dominion for the construction of the ships represents but five per cent, Mr. Howe said.

There has been a vast increase in employment in Canadian shipyards, Mr. Howe said. "Two years ago, only about 1,500 men were employed in our shipyards and the work was mainly that of ship repairs. To-day 20 shipbuilding yards, including three on inland waterways, are building steel ships. The number of men employed totals about 20,000 and as this program gains full momentum will total 30,000."

Communists In Canada

Government Giving Consideration To Status Of Party

Ottawa. — Consideration is being given by the government to the question of the status of the Communist party in Canada, it was learned, though at present no change is foreseen in the ruling that the extreme left party is illegal in this country.

"The status of the Communist party will undoubtedly be brought up in the house when parliament convenes," said Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, minister of justice. It was learned the cabinet has discussed the problem recently. The Communist party was declared illegal in Canada soon after war started, but with Russia a full ally, the position is being examined. Several leaders and members of the party are interned.

Rate Of Pay Announced

For Members Of Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force

Ottawa. — Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters announced that pay for the newly-established Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force will be at the rate of two-thirds that of the R.C.A.F. personnel.

Exceptions to this are senior officers, rank, for which a rate of pay is provided to correspond to that of a wing commander, and medical officers who will be paid at the same rate as those of the R.C.A.F.

Allowances covering subsistence, officer's outfit, transport and travelling, civilian clothing, general and shipment of personal effects will also be similar to that of the R.C.A.F.

New Highway Commission

Recommendation Made At Canadian Good Roads Association Meeting Niagara Falls, Ont. — Formation of a Canadian highway commission under federal auspices to co-ordinate provincial highway programs was recommended by Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works for Alberta, at the 28th annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association here.

The first duty of the commission, suggested by Mr. Fallow, would be to make a complete study of Canada's highway system from a national viewpoint and submit recommendations to the Dominion government.

All financial assistance to the provinces for inter-provincial or national highway improvement would be made with approval of the commission and assurance would be given that efforts of the provinces and Dominion could be made to fit into a well-formulated plan with a definite objective in view.

Mr. Fallow expressed opposition to any slow-down of highway development during the war.

A vast network of Canadian highways is playing an essential part in Canada's war effort. Theodore G. Morgan, chairman of the association executive, said in an address prepared for delivery.

Lacking the highway system which was the result of a far-sighted policy the Dominion's war effort would have been crippled, Mr. Morgan said.

Late this fall the Trans-Canada highway would be completed and while under war conditions no fare was planned its general worth and inestimable military value should not be overlooked. Adequate highway facilities had made possible constant expansion of the commonwealth air training plan, and had facilitated the movement of millions of tons of raw material to war industries.

Mr. MacPherson advocated continuation without any let-up of a program of highway construction and improvement. Federal aid should be given toward the construction and maintenance of main highways that form part of the whole Canadian system.

Nazi Octopus

Knox Says U.S. Is On German List Of Unfinished Business

Chicago. — Navy Secretary Frank Knox declared that an invasion of the Middle East and the British Isles is "a certainty" the moment the Nazi iron octopus can prepare itself for the assault, and the United States is on the German list of "unfinished business."

He stated in a broadcast address that "to-day, with Hitler's robot fanatics blasting at the gates of Leningrad and Odessa, with his Stuka bombers eager to return to winter night attacks on British industrial centres, with the actual invasion of the Near East and the British Isles not a possibility but a certainty the moment the Nazi iron octopus can prepare itself for the assault, and with the United States the final and most important item on the Nazi agenda of unfinished business."

He drew attention to the yearly report showing that during the last 12 months 5,000,000 cigarettes, 150,000 chocolate bars and 20,000 ditty bags costing $140,000 had been distributed by the league to Canadian seamen.

Thanked For Gifts

Navy League Of Canada Has Sent Many To Soldiers

Halifax. — Members of the Navy League of Canada, in the closing season of their annual meeting here, were thanked by Arthur Rindles, director of merchant seamen in the Dominion for their work since the outbreak of war. He drew attention to the yearly report showing that during the last 12 months 5,000,000 cigarettes, 150,000 chocolate bars and 20,000 ditty bags costing $140,000 had been distributed by the league to Canadian seamen.

Embarkation Facilities

Halifax. — Royal Canadian Air Force embarkation facilities here for men bound overseas are to be completely revamped. Air Minister Power said as he concluded a tour of R.C.A.F. establishments in this area. The new organization, he declared, will include a representative of the Royal Air Force and the Australian and New Zealand Forces.

BRITISH LABOR POLICY DEFENDED BY ERNEST BEVIN

London. — Replying to a complaint in the House of Commons that women are being called into war work too slowly, Labor Minister Ernest Bevin declared "no country, not even Germany, has tried what is a virtually compulsion of women as we have tried in this country."

He told the house Germany had been forced by a workers' "revolt" to abandon levelling wages and forced overtime, and added: "They adopted the usual ruthless German methods and found themselves up against what is a very strong and almost universal force — working class psychology."

"I would be stupid . . . to ignore the possible repercussions of taking an unwise step."

The entry of women into industry "as a result of the gradual speeding up has been growing week by week," Mr. Bevin said, "until now we are interviewing 40,000 to 50,000 a month."

Remembering that the mobilization of women would have broken down completely if he had used a "hard, official style," Mr. Bevin declared that "not only have I got women into industry almost up to the numbers required, but I have carried the confidence of parents with me."

The minister announced he is starting a complete new survey of the nation's labor resources. The survey will be based on the new employment cards which were issued to wage earners in August.

"The minister said he would like to

Penalty For Plotting

Muscolini Issues Death Warrant For Working Against The State

Rome. — Mussolini decreed the death penalty for plotting against the state in all Italian-annexed territories. As commander of Italian troops on all fronts, Mussolini issued the decree Oct. 3, fixing the death penalty for the following crimes in annexed territories:

Acts aiming at disturbing the unity, independence and integrity of the state; destruction, plunder and massacre aimed against the security of the state; promoting, leading or participating in armed insurrections against the state; organizing or leading associations aimed at overthrow of the political, economic or social order of the state; terrorism or political crimes tending to create public danger; serious damage to communications or public services.

Participation in such associations is punishable by imprisonment of three to 12 years, and handling propaganda for the overthrow of the political, economic or social order, five to 15 years.

Attempts on the safety or liberty of any member of the Italian armed forces are punishable by not less than five years in prison, and attempts on life by the death penalty.

Other penalties include: Strikes or lockouts for political purposes, one to 10 years; for other reasons, up to three years, with double punishment for leaders; for organizing armed bands to commit any of the above-mentioned crimes, death; for participating in such bands, life in prison.

BRITAIN GAINING UPPER HAND IN ATLANTIC BATTLE

Washington. — Indications multiplied that Britain is gaining the upper hand in the vital battle of the Atlantic while Hitler concentrates on the war in Russia.

Secrecy shrouds whatever naval measures have been taken against the German submarines and air-planes athwart the Atlantic supply routes between the United States and the British Isles but the result is apparent from recent developments.

In fact Lord Woolton, British minister of food, told the house of lords in London in so many words that "we have been getting the better of the enemy in the Atlantic — task in which we are now receiving most valuable American aid." This was demonstrated, he said, by the fact that Britain now hold reserves of bulky commodities such as wheat and sugar which make the heaviest demands on shipping.

Likewise Harry Hopkins, lend-lease co-ordinator, was reported to have told the conference of congressional leaders at the White House considering revision of the United States Neutrality Act that on the whole supplies from this country now were reaching Britain safely.

Significance was seen in the reduction of war risk insurance rates on British and Allied cargoes from the western hemisphere to Portugal and Gibraltar, ordered by the American Maritime Insurance Underwriters, and Interior Secretary Hickel's announcement that "due to greatly diminished sinkings," Britain soon might release 10 to 15 American tankers which had been diverted to her service.

B.C. Salmon Pack

Is Expected To Be The Highest In Years

Vancouver. — Major J. A. Motherwell, chief supervisor of fisheries here, predicted that British Columbia's salmon pack for the current season would quite likely exceed the 1,700,000-case estimate made at the start of the season, and some carriers expected the pack to surpass 2,000,000 cases, the highest in years.

The 1,700,000-case estimate was made as the approximate volume needed this season to meet domestic and export needs, including a 1,200,000-case order from the British government.

Officials of the Dominion department of fisheries here revealed that negotiations now are going forward between the Canadian and British governments for an additional British order of 20,000 tons of canned British Columbia herring.

The additional 20,000 tons order, equivalent to 1,600,000 cases, would bring the total British orders for B.C. canned herring during the 1941 season to 2,600,000 cases, worth some $7,000,000.

WARTIME WAGE BOARD MAY DEAL WITH DISPUTES

Ottawa. — Order-in-council P.C. 7440 which provides for cost-of-living bonuses instead of wage increases, is being revised, a labor department spokesman said.

As soon as revisions acceptable to the cabinet have been decided upon the question of new machinery to operate under authority of the order will be up for consideration.

So far any government intervention in labor disputes has been handled by officials of the labor department. There has been a suggestion which will be considered, the spokesman said, of having a separate wartime wage board set up, with representatives of industry and labor on it, to give its entire attention to wage disputes.

Another suggestion is that instead of a central wage board located in Ottawa, a more effective way would be to appoint regional boards, probably one each in the Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairie and the Pacific coast. The advantage of regional boards, it is suggested, would be that parties to a dispute would not have to take the time to travel to Ottawa but could deal directly with the board in their particular region when they required guidance.

Both these suggestions will be considered as soon as final decision has been made on the changes in the order-in-council. Until the cabinet has passed on these changes their scope will not be made public. It is known, however, that the wording of the order will be clarified in those parts in which lawyers have disagreed.

"Canada is pioneering in the order-in-council," this spokesman said. "It is the first country to propose bonuses based on increase of cost of living, and financial papers in Great Britain and United States are coming to the view that if inflation is to be held in check a similar principle will have to be adopted there."

As in all pioneer jobs, experience has shown weaknesses in the order, and it is to rectify them as soon as possible that we are preparing recommendations for the cabinet."

Shah Is Progressive

Young Ruler Of Iran Has Great Faith In Britain

Teheran, Iran. — Shah Mohammed Reza, 21 years old, 22 days the titular ruler of the oriental kingdom of Iran, expressed confidence that when Britain wins the war Iran's territorial integrity will be assured and the country will be given a chance to progress toward a goal he already has mapped out.

In a one-hour interview — first granted to an American correspondent — the shah said "we don't bear any ill feeling toward England for what has happened in Iran recently."

"I believe England has very good intentions toward us, realizing that the progress and restored integrity of Iran are a benefit to her."

The shah said he wanted a gray business suit and white sport shoes, spoke English as he talked of his hopes and ambitions for Iran. Five years of schooling in Switzerland, during which he studied political economy and sociology, have helped him in his responsibilities, and he has at his finger tips information about virtually every aspect of Iran.

"I hope to visit the United States after the war," he said. "I'd like to see another world — a world of progress and invention — and I'd like to meet your learned men."

For Victory

TALK TO BE AVOIDED

In a Labor Day message, Mr. A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, said among other things:

"Hitler doesn't hate labor unions any worse than many Canadian employers; he abolished them in Germany because they were democratic institutions: the anti-union employers in Canada oppose every effort to form them, and for the same reason."

Mr. Mosher, talking in this extreme way, isn't advancing labor's cause, and certainly not the war cause. Employers in Canada there may be who oppose unions, but to liken them to Hitler, who sent trade union leaders to concentration camps, and to charge that their attitude is born of hatred of democratic institutions, is the sort of talk that Canadians at this time should avoid. Not in this way, certainly, is this country going to achieve the unity and brotherhood which desperate common peril demands.

The people of Canada, almost overwhelmingly, are in favor of labor's right to organize. So is the Government. Mr. Mosher would be doing a better job for those he represents had he stressed this truth. Instead, he has seen fit to go out of his way to emphasize the wrong thing, to argue about a general situation on the basis of the particular—and an exaggerated particular, at that. As a consequence, the only end his statement serves is the end of a few agitators who, on the basis of their actions, seem more concerned with their own jobs as organizers than with Canada's war effort.

The people of Canada are in no mood to tolerate such talk. They want to get on with the war and with war production, and don't feel like permitting either foolish, greedy employers or selfish, ambitious labor organizers to thwart their will. In this, fortunately, they have the support of the vast majority of employers and employees alike.—Ottawa Journal.

A plan to promote a lot more sales of War Savings Certificates that is meeting with some success in Alberta communities is known as the "Eight Club." Members meet once a week, and each contributes 50 cents to a draw, the winner receiving a five-dollar certificate. Here is an idea that numbers of groups might well adopt, on a smaller or even larger extent.

TOO MUCH IN A NAME

A little boy in a New England town recently threw a stone at a neighbor's window and broke it. He didn't do it to do it. He had no reason to do it. His playmates dared him, but he paid no attention until they called him a "sissy." That was too much.

No one wishes to be called a "sissy," but people have attached such stigma to the word that only the starkest child or adult can withstand the insult. Window breaking is not the most serious result. Many a career of crime can be traced to a child's inability to cope with the gang's jeering cry of "Sissy!"

Too much power has been given to this word. Too much power is given to the crowd's jeers and cheers. But any child has found the answer. The boy who learns that to follow his highest sense of right is the truest proof of manliness will not become a gangster, local or international. He is father to the man who defies demagogues and makes self-government work.—Christian Science Monitor.

PAVED HIGHWAYS
ATTRACT TOURISTS

When highways are paved, tourist jumps. That has been proven again and again in the United States and also in Canada.

The province of New Brunswick, which has 1,000 miles of paved highways, has reported that as a result motor revenues have increased 100 per cent.

Another interesting fact brought out in connection with New Brunswick's experience is that since 1934 the number of visiting sportsmen taking out hunting licenses in the province has increased 400 per cent, while the number of non-resident anglers more than doubled.

The Alberta Motor Association stresses the need of hard-surfacing provincial highways, if this province is to obtain its rightful share of the tourist business.

When roads are paved, there is a multitude of benefits created, directly and indirectly. New service stations spring up at key points, garages are established, new avenues of business are created, all combining to make roads better for all concerned.

The public works department estimates that Alberta has some 700 miles of surfaced highways, much of which contains the first course of "blotter" type of bituminous surfacing. That mileage should be increased as speedily as possible so that it could soon be doubled, and tourists will be enabled to travel over hard surfaced roads to beauty spots in any part of the province that is reasonably close to a main highway.

FACTS ABOUT CANCER

Until the 20th century the diagnosis of cancer was rarely made until the disease was so far advanced that cure was hopeless. This led to two wrong conclusions prevalent today.

False: That diagnosis of cancer meant the patient's death warrant; that if a patient recovered, it was not cancer; this belief is all wrong, because:

True: Due to the wonderful achievements in modern medicine, cancer can be diagnosed now in its early stages; cancer can be cured if the patient consults his doctor in time.

Should you develop cancer, the chances of being cured depend largely upon yourself. Procrastination is the thief of life in cancer.

All phases of middle age having pain, bleeding, lump, ulcer, indigestion, loss of weight—see your doctor. If he thinks you ought to go to the Cancer Diagnostic Clinic, he will give you a completed form to take with you.

The Cancer Diagnostic Clinic is not a charitable clinic. It was established for your special benefit by the government.

Don't delay; the chances are over 90 per cent that you do not have cancer. Why not free yourself from worry and anxiety and find out?

COLOR SCHEME
FOR ALBERTA PLATES

Alberta's color combinations on the motor license plates for the new license year which opens April 1st will be white numerals on a blue background, according to information received by officials of the Alberta Motor Association.

It has been several years since this color combination has been used in this province.

Part of next year's supply has already been delivered to the provincial government, as the order for plates was placed in 1940. The province took the precaution of filing an order early when it was indicated that manufacturers might have difficulty in obtaining material for the plates, owing to war conditions.

While there have been suggestions from some states that it is intended to adopt a permanent plate, it is not likely that Alberta will take such action.

British Columbia, it is claimed, tried a permanent plate as an experiment, but decided to revert to the system of changing the colors each year.

Officials here also point out that a certain number of plates are lost each year and these have to be substituted now in any case.

Another point is that adoption of a permanent plate plan might cause some confusion to operating the system under which the province rebates 20 per cent of the annual fee if the plates are turned in before January 10th of each year.

A HORSE'S TALE

From Black Beauty on down, many a tale has been written about man's best friend, the horse. Or is it the dog?

But the newest horse's tale is soon told, and it is a bright one, full of light if not of sweetness. In Colorado riding academy and auto association competitions have agreed that horses ridden on the highway at night must wear red reflectors on their tails.

Paul Revere, if he were to make his famous ride today would have had to have three lights provided for him: "One if by land," and "two if by sea," and a third on the bouncing, swaying last section of his mount to pass a given point, just in case the British mechanized stuff came up too fast behind.—Ex.

Average of over 1,000,000 miles has been recorded by each of the "5700" class locomotives of the Canadian National Railways since they were placed in service in 1931, and most of this mileage has been done at high speeds.

LABOR'S WAR-TIME
RESPONSIBILITY

(From an address by Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply.)

The workers in our factories, with few exceptions, are working well and loyally to produce munitions of war. The rate of output per machine is astonishing, when we consider that the majority of our munitions workers have had but short experience in production work. Canada has established an enviable reputation for high quality and sound workmanship. The only threat to our creditable production record is loss of output through industrial disputes.

There is little ground for an industrial dispute today. The Government has established a basic wage for war industries—the highest wage rate of the last fifteen years—and has added to it a cost-of-living bonus. Government conciliation machinery can be set in motion quickly to adjust differences as to working conditions, without interruption of employment. As a matter of fact, neither wages nor working conditions play an important part in present-day labor disputes. In many instances strikes are being declared merely to force recognition and sole bargaining rights for a particular union.

Speaking personally, I have not the slightest quarrel with labor unions. All my experience leads me to believe that an agreement between an employer and a reputable and responsible labor union is helpful to the employer and is beneficial to the members of such a union. I think that every employer who had established contractual relations with a responsible labor union prior to the outbreak of war must now find himself in a preferred position.

Nevertheless, I believe the persons who are taking advantage of the urgency of war production to force workers to join a union to which they do not wish to belong, or to force them to pay dues to such unions, and to compel employers to grant them sole bargaining rights, are departing from the true principles of democracy.

Under Order-in-Council P.C. 2085, the Government announced its policy, namely, that employees should be free to organize in trade unions and be independent in so doing of any control by employers or their agents. The same order-in-council specifies that workers in the exercise of their right to organize should use neither coercion nor intimidation of any kind to influence any person to join their organization.

We are fighting this war in order that the true democratic principles—freedom of action and freedom of speech—may be maintained, yet we have certain labor "leaders" insisting forcefully that the workers shall not be permitted freedom of action; that employers shall not be free to discuss with individual employees any matter pertaining to their wages, hours or working conditions; that all such matters must be discussed only with a committee of the union; that the employees, even though unwilling to join the union, must pay dues thereto.

Canada cannot afford loss of production resulting from this type of dispute. An aroused public opinion can and should offer a formidable check to this type of activity. An illegal strike, in times such as these, is almost equivalent of desertion by a man in uniform in the face of the enemy.

We cannot falter in the great task before us. The defence of freedom must take precedence over every private interest. Forces of insane violence have been let loose by Hitler upon this earth. We must all do our full part in conquering them.

The Department of Munitions and Supply has been entrusted with the task of mobilizing Canada's full productive capacity for the manufacture of munitions and war supplies. As minister of this department, I feel that I can now report practical fulfillment of that task. Canada has taken responsibility for more war production than our factories can presently absorb. Canadian industry has co-operated fully by expanding production as required, and by undertaking new types of production.

Notwithstanding the strong views that I have felt it necessary to express regarding strikes in war industries, I am certain that the great majority of men and women engaged in industry all over this country are patriotic to the core. I am sure that they, like our sailors and soldiers and airmen, will stop at nothing to rid this country, and free men and women everywhere of the peril of Nazi domination. When the history of this war is written, I feel that Canadian industry and Canadian workmen, having a major part in the overthrow of Hitler and his gang, can share the satisfaction of looking back on a great task well done.

The Banff-Jasper highway has been closed for the season.

The new residence for Mr. and Mrs. Idria Evans, on Dearborn Street west, opposite C.P.R. station, is fast showing up. It is hoped to have same ready for occupation before December.

A large prairie chicken fell with some force from a height of twenty feet on Monday that it hit our north hip and knocked it out of joint. Placed on the scales, that bird weighed less than twenty-six pounds. South Alberta has a reputation for large game birds.

British labor is fully conscious of the issues involved and we have set about the task, together with your help, of beating Hitler in the production field. We have set aside our usual methods involving strikes and so forth and found ways of settling our differences, because we are determined that production shall not be interrupted. This acceptance of responsibility through better industrial relations has resulted in disputes being at their lowest, and now while I am speaking to you there is not a dispute worth mentioning in Britain. Yet not only are the great trade unions intact, but they are stronger than they ever were.—Mr. Hon. Ernest Bevin, British Minister of Labor.

OUR FOOD SUPPLY

Written specially for C. W. N. A. newspapers by John Atkins, farmer-journalist.

NO. 1—THEY ARE BOTH WRONG

City people who have never lived on farms, and farm people who have never lived in cities, have queer ideas about each other. Town people are more fortunate. They know farm people and farm people know them. They understand each other. They attend the same churches, belong to the same lodges and meet and work together in the Red Cross and other patriotic and charitable organizations. They live and work together and trade with each other personally.

There would be no farm problem such as we have today if town and country people had been left to solve it. But Canada has grown some big hungry cities and the people in these cities have a lot more to say about national policies than they ought to have. They have organizations for everything and these organizations are so busy promoting their own interests with governments that they carry a great deal more weight than their size and importance warrants. Town and farm people are just waking up to the fact that they need to be heard at Ottawa, too, if anyone is to get a square deal.

"The squeaking wheel gets the most grease" is an old farm axiom that seems to have been adopted by those who are heard above the din of war in the offices of government.

Organizations have changed the business of democratic government until the civil service seem to be divided between the takers-in and the givers-out. The duty of the takers-in appears to be to take from those who protest the least, and the duty of the givers-out to give to those who yell the loudest.

In the past, city people have asked too much from governments and have received too much. Rural people have asked for little, protested too little, and have lost out to the cities. They have been wrong. All have been harmed. Today farmers are organized across Canada and town people are giving their sympathetic support to the Canadian Federation of Agriculture in the sure knowledge that whatever is done to restore the balance between farm and urban earnings will benefit every town in Canada—every person in Canada.

Even in personal impressions, which make or mar goodwill, city and farm people do not know each other's problems are growing apart to their common harm.

City people who do not know farm life make farm people mad. They think farm people are to be pitied—that it is too bad that farmers have to work so hard for so little compared with their high city earnings. Something ought to be done about it, they think—something like holding a few bridge parties, or a tag day, to help farmers. They are surprised and hurt when farmers blow up and demand justice and fair play.

All that farm people want is fair prices and they are going to get them because only by paying fair prices for food can city people continue to get it. Farmers must have enough to pay their cost of production and to carry on. They are beginning to get it and when food prices get up in line with city earnings there will be a sound balance between city and country in Canada. Maximum food production will then be attained because agriculture's fair share of war wackers will help to produce war food.

It is a mistake to look for war prosperity. There will be shortages of civilian goods, particularly luxuries. There are already shortages of some foods, but we can produce our needs in munitions and foods if a proper balance is struck between urban and farm earnings.

A couple of girls handed the cashier of a cafeteria on their way out a slip with the number 1004180 on it. This satisfied the cashier, who let them pass without paying. Why? Well, it read: "I owe nothing; for I ate nothing." Figure it out.

SMOKERS WORST FIRE HAZARD
OFFICIAL STATISTICS PROVE

Sixty-two per cent of the total of 46,629 fires in Canada during 1940 were started by preventable causes which resulted in 29 per cent of the $22,735,284 property loss during the year, according to a statement recently released by the Western Canada Insurance Underwriters' Association in connection with the observance of Fire Prevention Week.

In the five categories listed as "preventable causes," smokers' carelessness caused the highest number of outbreaks, 13,264, or 30 per cent of all fires in Canada. Property loss resulting from this type of origin totaled $1,118,605.

The other four "preventable causes" included explosions, and friction which started 3,679 fires and did damage up to $1,645,378; stoves, furnaces and boilers caused 4,988 fires with a resulting loss of $2,037,428; defective and overheated chimneys started 4,321 fires and caused $1,220,864 loss, while 2,826 fires were caused by faulty electrical wiring which marked up a loss of $1,760,276.

"The regional associations of the 'Board' companies, in collaboration with other bodies, are constantly trying to drive home the lesson of cutting fire losses by the exercise of more care," reads the statement in part. "They also point out that insufficient coverage of risks and lack of insurance unnecessarily increase the wastage of Canadian property. Twenty per cent of all fire losses suffered in 1940 were uninsured."

"Canada's annual 'fire bill' is paid well in advance, without any of the usual commercial discounts, and it costs approximately $2.01 each, for every person living in the Dominion of Canada," the statement reveals.

CANADA YEAR BOOK 1941

The publication of the 1941 edition of the Canada Year Book, published by authorization of the Hon. James A. MacKinnon, minister of trade and commerce, is announced by the Dominion bureau of statistics. The Canada Year Book is the official statistical annual of the country and contains a thoroughly up-to-date account of the natural resources of the Dominion and their development, the history of the country, its institutions, its demography, the different branches of production, trade, transportation, education, finance, etc.—in brief, a comprehensive study within the limits of a single volume of the social and economic condition of the Dominion. This new edition has been thoroughly revised throughout and includes in all its chapters the latest information available up to the date of going to press.

The 1941 Canada Year Book extends to over 1,600 pages, dealing with all phases of the national life, and more especially with those susceptible of statistical measurement. A statistical summary of the progress of Canada is included in the introductory matter. This gives a picture in figures of the remarkable progress that the country has made since the first census of the Dominion was taken in 1871, seventy years ago.

Copies are available to the public by the King's Printer, Ottawa, at the price of $1.50 per copy. This covers merely the cost of paper, press work and binding. By a special concession, teachers and ministers of religion may obtain paper-bound copies at fifty cents each, but the number set aside for this purpose is more restricted this year, owing to the need for limiting expenditures of government funds, so early application for copies should be directed to the Dominion Statistician, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa.

CIRCUS ANIMALS UNDER THE HAMMER

(Bulletin from Britain)

A circus, owing to wartime harnesses, is forced to dispose of a mother lion and three cubs. A chaplain wants to buy a young lion—but not "too young." A purchaser must be found for a gaudy and talkative parrot. Such are some of the abnormal problems of a nation at war.

It is difficult for a political democracy to be ready at all times for war, as well as very upsetting and expensive. When a nation which has been both hoping and planning for peace suddenly is plunged into war, myriad problems arise, many of them amusing as well as important. This importance, however, is relative.

Amongst the problems that have had to be faced are those which involve the animals at the London Zoo and Whipsnade. In the past two years the difficulties there have attracted widespread interest, and most of the literate and free world knows that the zoo denizens are rationed and that rare poisonous snakes have been destroyed.

Many animals went at bargain prices during the course of an auction sale of the world-famed Sanger Circus. The elephant, Annie, aged 50 and weighing four tons, brought $210 from a Manchester zoo, where she will give rides to children. Another elephant, Alice, weighing two and a half tons—and therefore eating less—brought nearly $400; she went to another circus. As sales were completed, Annie and Alice trumpeted and plunged in resentment at their separation.

Farmers bought eighteen performing cream ponies for light field work. When brought out on exhibition the ponies thought it was just another circus performance and made the customary bow to the spectators.

There was unusually animated bidding for the gaudiest parrot in the circus, which eventually went to a bird fancier for $140. The man who obtained the parrot asked just before the completion of the auction whether the bird could talk. The auctioneer replied: "You bet he can. He's been bidding against you for twenty minutes!"

There was one unusually reverend individual in the auction crowd: Chaplain George Key, of the King's Own Royals. This British regiment carries a lion passant as a cap badge and is the only regiment in the army list permitted to have a live lion as a mascot. The mascot's post is at present unoccupied. The K.O.R. officers, desirous of filling the vacancy, subscribed $240 and deputized the chaplain to obtain a lion at a bargain price. Key ascertained that the three cubs offered for sale by the Sangers were too young for separation from their mother and, as he was empowered to take only one on regimental strength, this quartet went to another buyer for $100. Key could not let his associates be disappointed, so he appealed to a circus owner attending the auction and this man came to the rescue. He offered, gratis, a three-month-old cub from his menagerie, when it was old enough to leave its parent.

The sale attracted 3,000 persons, including an Aberdeen Scot clad in a Tartan shirt who bought nothing.

LINO TYPE ERRORS MAKE
AMUSING READING

Errors in the setting of type often make amusing reading, but are sometimes embarrassing to a newspaper staff. There is the one about the reporter who wrote the following about a golf story: "Her form was perfect and her shots fell with regularity on the green." The same phrase read in the evening edition of the newspaper: "Her form was perfect and her shots fell with regularity on the green." Classified ads sometimes take a beating on the linotype machine, such as the 1938 model car which was for sale, and read after the newspaper came out, 1930 model cab. There are a few amusing incidents in the life of every newspaper.

Blairmore mine was idle today.

The Harry Moore residence is being treated to new roofing.

Tony Vejgrava has decided to take an air-training course.

Mr. and Mrs. Babe Smith were down from Turner Valley during the week.

Recent Alberta recruits for the R.C.A.F. include A. S. Linn, of Blairmore.

A carload of Dodge cars, consigned to Bellevue Motors, was unloaded at Frank yesterday.

Friends of Mel Rhynas will be glad to learn that he is progressing favorably in a Pincher Creek hospital.

Several carloads of autos consigned to Crown's Nest Pass Motors and Blairmore Motors were unloaded here last week.

There's probably some clever hitch behind Alberta's suggestion of supplementing the federal old-age pension with a five-buck bonus.

Word has been received that E. A. (Dick) Harper has enlisted in the R.C. army pay corps, M. D. 10, at Winnipeg, with the rank of lieutenant.

Mrs. James Walters, of Lurdbrook, recently underwent a major operation at St. Vincent's hospital, Pincher Creek, and is reported doing well.

Eva James has again taken over her beauty parlor at the Cosmopolitan hotel after an absence of about six weeks, during which time the work was carried on by Mrs. Zinka.

What a typographical error can do! A recent newspaper article referring to a man joining the Yukon gold rush of many years ago, stated that "he started for the Yukon in search of gold."

A community auction sale will be held at the Lundbreck stockyards on Monday, October 27th, starting at 1 p.m. There will be horses, cattle, farm implements, furniture, etc., for sale to the highest bidder. H. D. Gerry will act as auctioneer. See bills for further particulars.

A LITTLE NONSENSE

"Oh, what a strange cow," exclaimed the old lady. "But why hasn't it any horns?"

"It's this way," explained the farmer, patiently. "Some cows are born without horns and never have any. Some shed their horns and some we de-horn. There's lots of reasons why some cows ain't got horns, but the big reason that this cow ain't got horns is because it ain't a cow, it's a horse."

Bob: "No, but they're making one for him."

Accepts Responsibility

India Will Take Care Of 84,000 European War Prisoners

India has so far accepted responsibility for accommodating 84,000 European prisoners of war on behalf of Britain. Up to date about 30,000 have arrived, of whom just over 3,000 are officers. There are no German military prisoners so far, but there are German internees. Italians include 25 generals and an admiral, while a second admiral is shortly expected. The whole of the expenditure on prisoners of war is a liability of Britain.

The prisoners' camps are designed to accommodate 3,000 each, with an administrative staff of eight officers, five interpreter officers and 60 other ranks. Each camp is divided into five wings, separated by wire, the wings having no communication with each other, and has its own hospital for about 500 patients. Officers are in separate wings.

Four such camps of 3,000 each comprise a group, and each group is under an administrative command with a small personal staff. Each group camp, that is 12,000 prisoners of war, is guarded by two infantry battalions. Seven group camps have already been established or are under construction.

The Dominion government will be asked by women's organizations of Winnipeg to establish a national nutrition policy for Canada.

At a meeting in Winnipeg representatives of local women's organizations adopted a resolution urging a national nutrition program and protection for consumers against undue price increases in essential commodities.

It is planned to submit the resolution to the National Council of Women, with a membership of 500,000 in the Dominion, for endorsement.

School Text Books

Author Of Successful One In A Series Of Best-Selling

The death of Charles Pencilbry, of "Pencilbry's Arithmetic," brings to mind the immense financial rewards that come to the author of a successful school text book. The author of a "best-seller" with a circulation of, say, 30,000 copies, goes about as if he owned the earth, but as a rule, after a few years the book is dead for all time. But let a man write a really popular school text book, and his circulation may run into millions, and he will draw huge royalties for perhaps the best part of a lifetime, says a London letter to the Ottawa Journal. Take, for example, a work such as "Hall and Knight's Algebra," which has been a popular text book for 40 years or more. Essentially it has varied very little throughout the years, and it has gone on bringing dazzling profits to the authors as well as to the publishers. Such works, of course, are the exception. In school books, as elsewhere, many are called but few are chosen.

UNUSUAL THREE-PIECE ENSEMBLE

By Anne Adams

It has that expensive "costume" look—Pattern 4804 by Anne Adams. A chic, easy-to-make bow turban, and a charming hand-bag match the accents on this tailored frock. The cleverly scalloped revers and deep headline border, the soft tie belt and bands on the sleeves, are all made of a fabric in contrast to the dress. . . . plaid-with-plaid is especially smart this year. The bands on the sleeves may be omitted. The dress itself is of the popular shirtwaist type, with a bodice buttoned down the front and a simple four-piece skirt. You'll be surprised how easy this distinctive ensemble is to make, with the Sewing Instructor to help you! Patterns for the dress, bag and turban are included in this novel design.

Pattern 4804 is available in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16, entire ensemble, takes 2 1/2 yards 38 inch fabric and 2 1/2 yards contrast. Eating More Bread

Consumption Has Risen in Britain During Last Few Years

Britain is eating three 2-1/2 loaves of bread per head each week, or 1/4 lb more than in the recent peace years, says the London Daily Sketch. This is the estimate of Mr. F. A. Bates, area Bread Officer for the South of England, who told a Daily Sketch reporter that bread consumption has risen from year to year. "In 1924," said Mr. Bates, "each citizen ate on an average 130 lbs. of bread. By 1936 the figure was 212 lb. At the present rate we are consuming 312 lbs. of bread a year."

Few Russian Officers Are Able To Speak Other Language

British officers who can speak Russian are as rare as they are in demand at present, says the New York World. Few officers of the Russian Army speak a word of any language but their own. In the old days French was the second language of every Russian officer. Indeed, it was more often spoken in the Imperial Palace and in St. Petersburg society than was Russian. According to those who are better linguists than the average among Britons, Russian is one of the most difficult languages in Europe.

An Expert Carpenter

Girl Born In Denmark Works In Father's Calgary Shop

Planners, handgrips, Sanders, circular saws and lathes are everyday working tools to Carry Falkenlove, Calgary's only known woman carpenter.

Miss Falkenlove, who was born in Denmark and came to Calgary with her parents when 10 years old, said carpentering was fascinating at first but now she sees nothing remarkable in it. A resident of the city for 13 years, she can be seen any day using the many different tools in her father's downtown carpenter shop.

"People look started when they see me doing carpenter work and generally turn for another look," she said. "It used to embarrass me at first, but now I'm just used to it. Carpentering fascinated me at first when I used to come down at odd times and help Dad. Now I'm quite into the way of it, but still like it." Miss Falkenlove attended school and since graduation two years ago has worked with her father. She helped build his new shop, making frames and yielding the hammer like a veteran carpenter, her father said.

When interviewed, she was making refrigerator doors to be installed in a downtown store. Her working outfit consists of a pair of brown slacks, a blouse, a heavy wool sweater and a light cap to hold her blonde hair out of her face. She does all kinds of intricate work on the wood-lathe and band saw and operates the machines. One of her many chores, she said, was to dower together door frames ready for installation. She said she had no fear of the high speed saws or sanding machine. "The only thing that makes me nervous is the cutter. The blades are turning so fast you can't see them and you have to get your hands so close to them you have to be careful."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

OCTOBER 19

THE HOLY SPIRIT OUR HELPER

Golden text: As many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God. Romans 8:14.

Lesson: Genesis 1:1; Psalm 11:1; Isaiah 63:10, 14; Joel 2:28, 29; Luke 11:13; John 3:5-8, 14:16; 16:7-14; Acts 1:8, 2:1-4, 22, 33, 4:31, 10:44-48, 13:1-7; Romans 8:9, 13-17, 26-28; 1 Corinthians 12:1-13; II Corinthians 13:14; Galatians 5:22-26; Revelation 1:10, 22:17.

Devotional reading: John 14:12-21.

Explanations and Comments

The Promise of the Holy Spirit, Acts 1:8. In their last interview with the Risen Lord, the disciples asked Him if he would at this time restore the kingdom to Israel. The Jews had had a kingdom in the long ago, but it had been conquered and they had been successively under the yoke of Assyria, Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Rome. The question had engaged much of the disciples' thoughts during Jesus' life with them, and was still uppermost in their minds. Their thoughts were upon power too, but not upon worldly power. He was thinking about the power in which his followers would carry on his work when he was gone, and knowing that they needed spiritual power he promised it to them "when the Holy Spirit is come upon you."

The disciples were not ready to go out and claim the world for Christ. They had been with him for three years, had walked and talked with him, knew his ideas, his principles, and his matches life, yet they were not ready to do his work. They must await the power which would be theirs with the coming of the Holy Spirit. "It is not by words, nor is it by ideas, nor by ideals, nor by symbols, nor by sacraments that this world can be brought to God. It can be brought to God only by the power of the Spirit of the Father."

The Fruit of the Holy Spirit, Galatians 5:22. He who is governed by the inner Spirit is not content merely to refrain from breaking the law; he exercises positive virtues against which there is no law, such as love, joy, peace, longuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, self-control.

If we live by the Spirit, by the Spirit also let us walk, counsels Paul. Walking by the Spirit is the effect of living by the Spirit. If the Holy Spirit has control of our lives, then we are living righteously.

Work Is Very Hard

Hundred English Women Put In Long Hours As Navvies

A hundred women navvies, all volunteers, are doing the toughest women's work in the world. They work 40 hours a week and earn from £3.54 to £4.15s.

One is a mother of 13, others are still in their teens, and they recently appealed to the local Minister of Labor official for a heavier job than any of the regular women's organizations could provide.

He gave them picks and shovels and put them on navvies' work as an experiment. Now they call themselves the "Pick and Shovel Corps" and contractors, at first hesitant about the idea, say they would not be without them.

They are employed on work of national importance. Some are laying concrete pipes for drainage, others driving tractors, operating concrete mixers, and levelling.

Mrs. F. Wright is a London evacuee and has 13 children. The Labor Exchange official said I was too old. "But I kept pestering them, and here I am."

Miss Margaret Blake, slim and pretty, left school only a few months ago—now she is helping to put down huge drainage pipes.

Working with her are 18-year-old former school assistant Betty Pugh, and Mrs. Barnett, who gave up paint spraying.

The girls have their own assistant forewoman—a former London housewife—who is a cook, a packer in a chocolate factory, and a housewife who was bombed out of her home—London Daily Sketch.

Something New

Reports from Berlin say that the continuous R.A.F. raids are extremely irritating to German public opinion. This is the first indication we have seen of the possibility of there being any German public opinion, says London Punch.

Nazi Lies Backfired

Italian forces in Africa adopted a "why-fight?" attitude when the German propaganda machine told them the war would be over before winter and they would be back home. That was one of the reasons for the wholesale surrender of the Fascist soldiers, according to Brigadier Arnold Minnie, who was in charge of British engineering forces in East Africa, and spent some time in Abyssinia. The Italians were completely "cleaned up," so he is now in Canada on route home "looking for a new job."

RATS SPREAD DISEASE

That the common brown rat is something more than a nuisance, is shown by a recent survey of typhus fever conditions in the Southern United States. According to official figures, cases of this disease reached an all-time high in 1939, while the areas affected are said to be steadily widening.

Scientific investigators established that the brown rat was the "reservoir host," says the Journal of the American Medical Association, and the rat flea the chief agent in passing the infection on to human beings.

Special attention was paid to an outbreak of 75 cases at Nashville, Tennessee in 1939. There it was found that the chief focus of the disease was in the granaries and warehouses close to the railways which enter the city. Grain cars are believed to be one of the principal means by which the rat hosts travel farther afield, carrying the disease with them.

The appearance of the disease in a number of new cities, far from its earlier habitat, constitutes a public health problem of increasing importance, says the Journal. "The solution lies in a more rigorous rat eradication program."

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

—BY—

CHAPTER XXVIII

The telephone bell roused her the next morning just as she tried to find her way back to consciousness from dream-tormented sleep.

"Devona, darling?" Tal's voice, vibrant with excitement.

"Yes," sleepily. "Tal?"

"Angel, I have magnificent news. I'm coming right down to tell you. Have breakfast with me!"

"Of course. How soon?"

"Twenty minutes should be long enough for you to get yourself beautiful. Love me this morning?"

She smiled into the receiver. "Yes, Tal—love you very much."

And the little smile lingered as she showered, dressed. How could she help loving him? High-strung, effervescent, he was like bubbling champagne himself. And some day, she promised her hollow-eyed reflection, she'd get over this silly feeling she had for her brother. Some day she'd realize how lucky, how terribly lucky she was that Tal, fine and splendid and idealistic, had offered her a real love.

Later, over their toast and coffee, Tal beamed at her boyishly. "Darling, you've brought me amazingly good luck already." He reached for her hand across the table.

"Have I, really? Tell me!"

"John Brannon, a New York agent, saw my play last night and said it was pretty awful but he liked the dialogue—some of it. Said it showed promise of the kind of thing he wants. So he's offered me a job—in New York with him and I'm to collaborate on a musical comedy another chap is writing. How's that?"

"Oh, Tal! How wonderful!" Devona felt her own enthusiasm skyrocket. "I know it would have to happen eventually. But—so soon! Aren't you thrilled? Oh, Tal, darling, I am proud of you."

"Are you," tenderness flooded into his eyes, "my little guardian angel?"

For a minute, she couldn't speak for gratitude to luck or fate or that strange destiny of her that had granted her this supremely happy moment. At least this was one thing she'd done well. She'd saved Tal for this immediate reward. And this—like a good omen—assured her she could go on playing this role of guardian angel. It would be enough. If not ecstasy, it would bring satisfying peace and happiness in Tal's joys. What more could she ask of life?

"We'll leave the middle of next week, honey," he planned rapidly. I'll have to hang around here a few days to wind up some business. Then we'll fly to Reno and get ourselves married. No fuss and feathers. Okay?"

"Okay."

"Well, now suppose we trot right down to your pal Macias' place and hand in your resignation. There's nothing I'm going to enjoy more than telling that guy—"

"Oh, no. Not yet, Tal," she interrupted quickly. After all, she did have a job to finish up. "I must—"

But did she? Tal would forbid it, if he knew. Dale, too, probably—much as it might mean for him at the coming primaries. She could easily report her suspicions to one of Dale's undersecretaries, she thought wryly. And let it go at that. After all, it was none of her business—

"What do you mean not yet?" Tal demanded, frowning.

"I—I have a special reason, Tal," she tried to explain. "I can't tell you now—but I must stay on until—after Tuesday."

"But—"

"Please, darling, I promise that after Tuesday I'll never go near that place again. And—don't worry about Macias. He eats out of my hand."

Tal's frown relaxed into a grin. "No doubt. But why Tuesday?"

"Oh—secret."

So did she, she added silently. She was insane, probably, to risk this—just for her pride's sake. And for Dale. But no one else could see this through. No one else had the opportunity to really nail this thing. She was sure of that.

Not that Tal would feel she was lying up to that promise, she told herself Tuesday afternoon, as she stepped out of her street clothes into the costume she would wear to-night for the last time. She could hardly call his plan taking care of anybody—unless it were Dale—who hadn't asked her, wouldn't thank her even, to butt into his affairs. Fool that she was.

Dressed finally—in the soft, red satin to-night. Macias liked it best of her costumes. She dusted the powder puff over her flushed cheeks, drew a long breath. So far she'd been lucky. She hadn't seen Macias since the night of the intercepted phone call. He'd been ill, his house-boy had phoned. Confined to his bed with a serious chest cold. But to-night he was coming back to the club.

If he really had been ill, she thought as she made her way to his office, then she was truly as good as dead. But if illness had been only a blind to—

She tapped softly at the door, pushed it open.

He'd been ill, all right. Darkened circles under his eyes, cheeks hollow, black eyes heavy. He looked up at her across his littered desk.

"Hello, Dona," and then, before he could go on, a spasm of wrenching coughs. "Wait. Want to—talk," he gasped.

Devona waited, a tight rein on her fears, a calm smile to hide behind, if he'd discovered her lie—had heard about the change in plane—the shift to No. 47 Front St.

"How's it been going?" he asked as soon as he had the breath.

"Fine."

"This damned cold's got me down."

He coughed again, wiped his eyes. "Everything's in a mess. Sorry I can't take you home to-night. I wanted to talk to you. But—"

He waved at the mess of papers. "Looks as if I'll be here all night."

Devona released anxiety with a long sigh. Not a trace of suspicion. So far, everything was too easy to be true!

"Please—don't mention it. Some other time—when you're not so busy," she said, and hoped her excitement didn't show. "I'm so glad you're some better."

"Some other time! And there'd never be another time, she told herself happily as she wandered with the Troubadours from table to table that evening. Her last night on display. Her last night as Dona Cardella.

Almost—she added, wryly. There was still to-night's little adventure. It wasn't quite time for congratulations. Not until "some time after midnight."

She sang her best that evening, gave generously of her encores and her smiles. Even Manuel noticed it. "Why so cheerful, Sweetheart?"

"Aren't I, always?"

"Not like to-night." He studied her frankly. "Anything up?"

She shook her head. "No, why?"

"O.K., pal. Keep your little secret. But—"

And he jerked his head toward the gray-paneled door, "something's up with the big chief, too, I'm guessing. Something he doesn't like. So—keep out of his way. I'm warning you."

"I'll be careful," she promised, smiling; but a little worry tagged in to her mind. Something upsetting Macias to-night? Surely he couldn't have guessed—be suspicious. She'd just talked to him. He'd seemed—

She brushed the thought aside. She'd have seen something was wrong. One look at the dark eyes had always been warning enough before.

When it was nearly midnight she slipped to her dressing room, shed her costume. She didn't usually leave quite this early. Still, Macias, busy in his office, wouldn't miss her, and the Troubadours sometimes slipped the 1 o'clock show, if there weren't many customers. Fortunately, to-night had been slow.

Escapes from her dressing room, out the back way through the kitchen to the alley, was easy enough. And from there to the street behind and a drug store where she phoned for a taxi.

No. 47 Front St., in San Pedro, she told the driver, and discouraged his quick surprise with a frosty little nod.

The long ride down busy Windsor Blvd. roused her a little. A fascinating street, she loved it.

Then, as they left the gay lights of the great, broad street, drove nearer and nearer the San Pedro waterfront, friendliness fell behind, and a sort of sinister reticence hovered in the shadowy, winding streets, where thin, decrepit houses, poorly lit, lurked in rows just at the edge of the fringe of street lights.

"Here you are, miss. No. 47." The driver stopped the car, leaped out to swing open the door.

For the space of a sigh, she hesitated. No. 47, a narrow, two-story frame house was, like every other house on the block, an exact replica of the one next door. Unlike the others, a light burned behind a closely drawn blind in an upper room. Through the taxi's open door she felt the cold slap of the sea wind on her cheek, smelled the dank oily odor of sodden pilings of an outgoing tide.

"Here you are, Miss." The driver's voice jogged her impatiently.

"Yes. Thanka." She climbed out, pulled her jacket collar closer. "Will you wait, please."

"Wait?" Sure, Miss, and closing the door climbed back under the wheel.

The narrow porch steps creaked under her light step and a loose board chimed. She waited a moment, fingers trembling against the old-fashioned knocker, while her breath caught up with her. Silly to be frightened at a few shadows and a creaking step, she scoffed. But—and tried to muster a little laugh—the place was so perfectly the scene for a ghost story. It would really be disappointing if something exciting didn't turn up after all this.

She pulled stanchly at the knocker. Inside she heard its hollow thudding echo through what must be a long hall. Echoes and then—footsteps. Quick, short steps as of a person half running. Like the rickshaw coolies of Shanghai, she thought, irrelevantly.

Suddenly what had seemed to be merely a carved panel in the old-fashioned door opened gapingly. A face appeared. A strangely familiar face. Almond eyes, close set, a cruel mouth twisted in a yellow face.

Devona's heart stopped. The face behind the gaping aperture was—Wong!

Marshal Arthur Timoshenko, Soviet army commander defending Moscow, is a brother of "Archie" Timoshenko, a prospector of Winston (formerly Swastika), in northern Ontario. The brothers were born on the same day, March 28, three years apart. For this reason the priest named them both Arthur.

One Thing Missing

An officious and unpopular A.R.P. official was putting the stretcher-bearer party through its paces. He lay on the ground and said, "Now, remember, I'm completely smashed up. Every bone in my body is broken. Now, let's see how you pick me up."

The stretcher-bearer picked him up efficiently and asked, "Well, was that satisfactory?"

"Yes, it was all right," snapped the officious one, "only you didn't have the look of regret in your eyes I expected."

London's Royal Mint

London's Royal Mint expects to turn out more medals in the year following the present war than at any period in its history; and in an average year it strikes 34,000 of them and of decorations of all kinds. The Mint has been doing that continuously since 1643 when Charles I. instituted the Fothering Hope Badge.

Now that a big effort is being made to have Pass merchants recognize a union, why not pass another petition asking the Town of Blairmore to co-operate with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police? There are many kiddish tricks performed by grownups nowadays that should be paid for with the lash or a whipping. A few nights ago, while the Rex taxi was standing for but a few minutes, the metal sign, bolted on the front over the radiator, was destroyed by some person so far unknown. Other stunts, thought to be clever is the smashing of electric light globes, cutting or otherwise defacing plateglass windows, costly signs or car finishes and slashing tires, all of which represents a terribly deranged mind.
